Hello, I am Claudia Ruiz and currently working as a product designer for a data company in the real estate and banking industry. Started in the field as a graphic designer, moved from web development to UX designer to now learning emerging technologies.

My experience (10y+) spans from startups to large organizations in media, fintech, and big data, preferring using data to drive design decisions while balancing the best level of quality with quick releases to continue the measure-improve cycle.

Through my time practicing design, I learned that building the right design case comes from a holistic understanding of people, technology, and systems. I stay fascinated by the interdisciplinary nature of the field, human factors, and emerging tech. Today my goal is to work on a meaningful project with a cool team.
